

where do you find hope?

M. D. Anderson Cancer Center Orlando contains more than the latest cancer-fighting equipment and technology. More than the nation's top doctors. More than the bravest patients. There's also hope – the most hope for survival.

adds hope.

Our cancer center isn't a somber place people go to because they're sick. It's an encouraging place that helps them become healthy again. A place that gives them the most hope for defeating one of life's toughest problems. M. D. Anderson – Orlando uses the latest cancer-fighting medicines and technology, such as Helical Tomotherapy and Novalis radiation units, to give patients hope - the most hope for survival. But there's more to beating cancer than technology.

add hope.

Knowledge and expertise fight cancer too. Our physicians at M. D. Anderson - Orlando treat all types of cancer, but many have been specially trained and are dedicated to treating one specific type. They know everything there is to know about breast cancer, prostate cancer, leukemia – whichever one they specialize in – and they're the leaders in their field. That difference is what makes an M. D. Anderson – Orlando specialist. And our specialists add hope to the lives of our patients every day.

add hope.

Defeating cancer builds a bond between people. A bond that can be seen every day inside M. D. Anderson – Orlando. Some of our survivors are also our doctors, nurses and receptionists, although their most important role is being inspirational. These brave survivors faced cancer first hand and now help others fight. They know hope. They give hope.

At M. D. Anderson – Orlando, everything we do for our patients adds hope – the most hope for survival.
